

Captains of Industry or Robber Barons? – Mini DBQ

Overview: The thirty years following the end of the Civil War is often referred to as the Gilded Age. This was a term coined by Mark Twain, the most renowned American writer of the period. It refers to a superficial period of intense economic growth. During this time, businessmen created large business organizations known as trusts. The ingenuity of these entrepreneurs earned them the titles of “Captains of Industry.” Yet, their ruthlessness in building wealth at the expense of their competitors, workers, and consumers often earned them the titles “Robber Barons.” This Mini DBQ asks you to decide whether these businessmen were truly “Captains of Industry” or assuredly “Robber Barons.”

Background Essay

Captains of Industry or Robber Barons?

During the post-Civil War period an era commonly referred to as the Gilded Age, the economy of the United States grew at a fantastic rate. With the exception of a recession during the mid-1870s and another during the mid-1890s, the economic growth was unprecedented in United States history. Manufacturing output increased by 180 percent. Railroads, an important catalyst of growth, increased in miles by 113 percent. Steel production grew to over 10,000,000 tons per year by 1900. Every aspect of the American economy expanded from traditional activities to new enterprises brought about by the huge influx of cutting-edge technological inventions. The gross national product almost doubled during the period and the per capita GNP increased by 35 percent. Wages matured by 20 percent and a new American middle class emerged for the first time in the history of the United States.

Cities grew during this period as people moved from rural areas and immigrants arrived from around the world to work in the ever expanding factories. The population of Chicago for example multiplied from 30,000 people in 1850 to over 1,700,000 by 1900. The population of New York City increased during the same period from just over 500,000 to over 3,000,000. Birmingham, Alabama emerged in 1871 as a new city built upon the thriving steel industry. Electricity began to light and power industrial cities with the patenting of the dynamo. Skyscrapers emerged to change the landscape of the American city.

Farsighted, shrewd, and enterprising businessmen are often credited with bringing about the economic prosperity of the period. The steelmaker Andrew Carnegie, the banker J.P. Morgan, the oilman John D. Rockefeller, and the railroad magnates Jay Gould and Cornelius Vanderbilt top the list of a group of industrialists often identified as the “captains of industry” who had the vision and invested the time and effort to grow the economy.

Yet, not everyone at the time had a favorable view of these entrepreneurs. In an effort to create monopolies, corner markets, and increase profits these men often resorted to rather unscrupulous tactics. These methods included manipulating the stock market, bribing politicians and officeholders, and ruining competitors. Consumer prices rose as the trusts held by these men came to control entire industries.

Workers were treated badly by the capitalists and their management organizations. Workers were often forbidden to strike, paid very low wages, and forced to work very long hours. Working conditions in both factories and mines were deplorable. Housing for the working class was crowded and substandard. Child labor made up over 5 percent of the national labor force. These tactics soon led to the businessmen being labeled as “robber barons.”

By the early twentieth century, the richest 9 percent of Americans controlled 75 percent of the national wealth. The number of millionaires increased from 300 to over 4,000. Yet, working families were forced to rely on two, three, and sometimes more, incomes to make ends meet. To the poor, the working class, reformers, and consumers, the Gilded Age was not golden.

Still, the businessmen of the period felt justified in their actions as the United States became the world’s leading industrial power with the U.S. producing as much as Germany, Britain, and France combined. “It will be a great mistake for the community to shoot the millionaires, for they are the bees that make the most honey, and contribute most to the hive even after they have gorged themselves full.” – Andrew Carnegie

“While the law [of competition] may be sometimes hard for the individual, it is best for the race, because it insures the survival of the fittest in every department. We accept and welcome, therefore, as conditions to which we must accommodate ourselves, great inequality of environment, the concentration of business, industrial and commercial, in the hands of the few, and the law of competition between these, as being not only beneficial, but essential for the future progress of the race.” – Andrew Carnegie

Source: Andrew Carnegie, The Gospel of Wealth (1889)

“Thus the problem of Rich and Poor to be solved. The laws of accumulation will be left free; the laws of distribution free. Individualism will continue, but the millionaire will be a trustee for the poor; entrusted for a season with a great part of the increased wealth of the community, but administering it for the community far better than it could or would have done itself.” – Andrew Carnegie

"This then, is held to be the duty of the man of wealth: First, to set an example of modest, unostentatious living, shunning display or extravagance;...and, after doing so, to consider all surplus revenues which come to him simply as trust funds, which he is called upon to administer...to produce the most beneficial results for the community – the man of wealth thus becoming the mere trustee and agent for his poorer brethren, bringing to their service his superior wisdom, experience and ability to administer, doing for them better than they would or could do for themselves."

Here, Cornelius Vanderbilt straddles his two railroads, the "Hudson River R.R." and the "New York Central R.R.", admonishing his competitor, "Now then Jim--No Jockeying You Know!" The dwarflike James Fisk, sitting astride the "Erie R.R.", replies, "Let em rip Commodore!--But Dont Stop to Water or You'll be Beat."

Historian B 1953

“Much of the blame heaped on the captains of industry in the late 19th century is unwarranted. Although people like Rockefeller used methods that were ethically questionable, the kind of monopolistic control that they exercised was a natural response to the cutthroat competition of the period and reflected the trend toward business consolidation in all industrial nations. The captains of industry like Rockefeller were innovators, thinkers, planners, and bold entrepreneurs who imposed upon American industry a more rational and efficient pattern. They also created a model of philanthropy for all to follow. Had it not been for these captains of industry, the free world might have lost the first world war and most certainly have lost the second.”
